“ It was 1945
A war bride from Naples arrived
To a new world without friend or family.
Her English was not yet learned.
Her new reality was terrifying.

Then a beautiful person entered her life,
Spoke to her like a sister,
And brought a welcomed calm to a new friend in need.

The beautiful person helped teach the war bride her new language,
They held hands and shared hugs during life's dark moments.
They drank wine and laughed when fate brought joy to them both.

And so it was for a life time. Antoinette Canull and Anna D'Angelo
Sisters of different mothers whose beautiful friendship is still cherished by Anna's family.

Rest in peace, dear Antoinette...rest in peace.

“ What can't I say about our beloved Ann? I have known her over half my life and thought of her as my second mom. She was my rock when my brothers died and a shoulder to cry on through my mom and dad's illnesses. I am so lucky to have been a part of her life and her wonderful family too. Living so close to her at Duck Lake was a gift and I was at her home every morning for coffee and a chat. I also got to spend time with her here in Florida a few days before she left us. I will cherish all my wonderful memories and will miss her so very much. Lord, I loved that woman!!

“ I am so sorry Suzette and Pixie, we all loved your mom. All the neighborhood women are all gone now, I remember them all having coffee in our dining room in the mornings. How did they have time for that? Love you two, prayers coming your way.
