“ Butch is still to this day, my knight and shinny armor. I will him more than anything. I remember when we first met. From that day on, we have never left each other's side. He made me smile and laugh, he knew me, I knew him. We went through a lot in life together and I could not of done any of it without him. For 5 years he suffered with depression, I helped as much as I could, I begged him to seek help, i begged him not to do it. I was able to keep him alive for 5 years. I will never forget seeing him laying there. My life ended that day. I died with him, as we were truly one. I miss him more than life. i still cry all day everyday. he was my life, my everything, my best friend, hero, my first real true love. He always will be. I will never move on, as he will always hold my heart, mind and soul. I love you baby! Until I'm in your arms again one day.....

“ So saddened to hear of his passing... I would pass him 2 or 3 times a day on Terry St. and I always knew there was going to be a hand coming out of the window of his Tundra to wave at me in my UPS truck... gonna miss him for sure.. Prayers to Pam and the rest of his family
