“ I started working with Jeff in the late 1980s at Tatman Auto Body, Urbana, IL. The facility was undergoing a rebranding of sorts by bringing in me to be their receptionist (which was unheard of for auto body repair shops at the time) and to convert their financials from ledger paper to computer (also cutting edge, at the time). One day, Jeff thought it would be fun to be "Mr. Important" and asked me to get a buddy of his on the phone and say "Mr. Tatman is awaiting your call. Please hold while I put you through." He got real tickled with that and thought I was pretty cool for playing along with the joke. Jeff was a super guy, enjoyed a good story, and made me feel welcome. That was my first job, and Jeff was a big part of why I felt like I belonged in their auto body repair family. Enjoy your reward, Sporty, and save a place for the rest of us at God's table.
