“ I remember Uncle Richie sitting at the piano, plinking out a Beatles song, singing along with his big head of curly hair. He really loved to make others smile.

“ I knew Richard from the Game room in the back that Richard ran. People don't have game rooms anymore for whatever reason but back then it was a place to hang out for us teenagers in the s.e. of Austin. There was like 4 pinball machines. So Rich created a Pinball league, the teams started forming and everybody had a name. Our name was the Cosmic Crayons, I think Clay Preckel and some one else was on our team. Richard kept all the stats and standings and we had a play off bracket and The Crayons ended up with 1st place trophies. Course he had beatles music playing in the background and a good time was had by all. Also there were pool tournaments and Foosball matches. I was lucky enough to be a guitar player like Richard so many hours were spent entertaining or irritating the kids at The game room. Always remember Dayers as a break from the outside world of boredom, and Rich was a guy just about everybody liked and the Ring leader of Dayers Game Room, for a short time way back in past. R.I.P. Old friend.....

“ I lost track of Richie and Sean for many years after high school, Facebook was a great way to reconnect and there were always guitar posts from Ritchie, so I got to enjoy his music. So sad to think we will never get those random guitar posts again... You will be missed...

“ I was in only my second year of teaching when Richard was in one of my geometry classes. He learned of my love of the Beatles and playing the guitar. I am proud of whatever small part I may have played in Richard's love of the same!

“ I worked with Rich at the St Clair Broiler in the early 80's in St. Paul, MN. Some days I would get pretty sad and when he caught me at it he would do this hilarious "can you walk like this sketch" from Monty Python, he would go on and on with all these different crazy walks until I was helpless with laughter. He was a great guy.

“ I can still remember Richard sitting on his guitar amp, playing electric guitar. I was about five years old, and that was the first time I had ever seen somebody playing an electric guitar. This memory, as well as a few other of Richard's musical accomplishments have inspired me throughout my life.

I can still remember years ago when we would all meet for the swamp buggy parade, he would grab my arm and make me dance with him every time a band would go by. What I remember the most is ability to make people laugh.

“ When Rich and I were very young, we used to play our version of homerun derby in our back yard. We played with a whiffle ball to prevent broken windows and a plastic bat. We played a live version. We pick a team and then played their entire line up. Normally, he was the Twins and I was the Cardinals. You had to mimic the players batting style. Open stance, closed stance, left handed or right. We mimic it all. Even the pitchers, if it was a lefty, we threw left handed and right if it was a righty. I don't remember if we kept a win/loss record, but if we did, he would have remembered.
