“ As the one year anniversary of my good friend's passing approaches, I find peace in knowing that Bill is no longer suffering. All of us know how whenever you were ending a phone conversation with Bill, he would ALWAYS say "have fun". In my heart I feel that is what he is doing in Heaven, having fun. I miss him.

“ Bill was our upstairs neighbor in St. Petersburg. Each time he would come home from work or from wherever before going upstairs to his apt, he would sit for a few minutes in one of our patio chairs. The dogs would always let us know he was there giving us the opportunity to go outside and chat with him. Bill share about his day. Bill had a sarcastic sense of humor which we loved. He would update us on his health and we often times shared some of our home cooked meals especially around the holidays.

He sat in our chairs each time he was coming or going and if we were home, that was our casual chat time.

Rest In Peace Bill. You will be missed.

Bill was a great guy. He was my first crush, it took a while before he would even give me the time of day. Finally we became close and remained friends for all of my adult life. Although he was fighting the battle, he never lost his sarcastic sense of humor. He shall be deeply missed. Condolences to his family. Goodbye dear old friend, rest easy now.

Bill was the first person I met when I moved to Connecticut. We remained friends even after he moved to Florida. He ended up living 10 minutes from my mother so every year when I would go see my mom I would make sure that we would get together. During the rest of the year we would keep in touch but over the last year we got much closer. I would call to try and keep his spirits up because I knew he was going through so much. He would call and make me laugh and then I would make him laugh. We would be involved in a great conversation and he would have to hang up because Perry Mason was coming on but eventually he said he saw every episode so we could keep talking. I'm going to miss those calls. I will cherish our friendship forever and hold our many memories close. He is no longer suffering rest in peace my friend.
